

Gender Equality in the US: 2011-2016

Data from World Economic Forum's Global Gender Gap Reports

- ▶ The leftmost graph shows the relative gender equality rankings between 2011 and 2016, suggesting a downward trend (orange line) for the US.
- ▶ The graphs in the middle show the relative rankings in four major battlefields for gender equality: Economic Participation and Opportunity, Educational Attainment, Health and Survival, and Political Empowerment.
- ▶ The rightmost graphs decompose the scores the US got in 2016 in the four fields mentioned above. Orange parts represent the scores, and gray parts represent the distances to equality. Together they represent the weight of each subindex. Note that all indexes are relative in that they compare females against males; and wherever females have advantages over males, the advantages are not reflected here.
